SUMMARY

H.Res. 1079 resolves that the House of Representatives:

- Supports the goals and ideals of Financial Literacy Month, including raising public awareness about financial education;
- Recognizes the importance of managing personal finances, increasing personal savings and reducing indebtedness in the United States; and
- Requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the Federal Government, States, localities, schools, nonprofit organizations, businesses, other entities, and the people of the United States to observe the month with appropriate programs and activities with the goal of increasing financial literacy rates for individuals of all ages and walks of life.

BACKGROUND

In the current economic environment, the emphasis on financial literacy has increased. A survey conducted by the National Foundation for Credit Counseling found that only a minority of Americans keep close track of what they spend each month. In addition, a 2005 Government Accountability Office study found that some consumers do not understand many aspects of credit reports and the affect of personal credit histories. By law, the investigation must be completed in six months.

On January 22, 2008, President George W. Bush signed an executive order that established the President's Advisory Council on Financial Literacy, which is chaired by Charles Schwab, Chairman of the Charles Schwab Corporation.

The Advisory Council is made up of 16 members from the business, faith, and non-profit communities who are involved in the delivery of financial literacy services. The Council is tasked with working with the public and private sector to help increase financial education efforts for youth in school and for adults in the workplace, increase access to financial services, establish measures of national financial literacy, conduct research on financial knowledge and to help strengthen public and private sector financial education programs.
